Digg.com and Wikipedia attack truth and promote anti Semitic hate

Posted by avideditor on May 14, 2008

When searching for something in a search engine wikipedia and digg.com stories are usually the first results. It looks as if anti-Semitic moderators at these two sites are trying to rewrite history with anti-Israeli lies. It is important to do what ever we can in order to prevent jihadi propaganda from brainwashing billions of internet users. Do what you can to help win this war against influential misdirected moderators that control the flow of information.

Honest Reporting has the story about what is going on at wikipedia. It looks like the moderators are going after people that are trying to correct the anti-Semitic lies and anti Israel propaganda. I have personally experience the same disgraceful moderation and uncheck hated of jews and the truth at Digg.com just see what digg.com readers have to say about the wikipedia story. It is scary. I highly recommend reading what Honest Reporting wrotes but I think Honest Reporting is being too civil in response to the problem. continue reading to hear more about more problems with digg.com .

For the last three years I have been trying to combat the anti-Semetic bigots on digg.com. It got so bad over the last six months that I spent more then two hours a day building up like minded people and creating a collation to combat stories and comments ranging from out right lies about Israel to blood liable to blaming the Jews for all the worlds problems including 9-11.

Two months ago I was kicked out but it was understandable because I was posting muliti paragraph responses and multiple links to clear up misinformation in one comment thread. I was given an option to restore my account, after I complained. But I didn't want to admit that I was braking the terms of service with the site because I saw so many promoting baseless hatred of the jewish people and jihadi propaganda use the same approach. I also had hundreds of electro-jihadis (extreme leftist and fundamentalist muslims from around the world using electronic means to spread hatred of Jews, Israel, and America, in an attempt to brainwash and demoralize others so Radical Islam can be established world wide) following me, so I decided to start out fresh.

I changed my practices. I didn't post multi paragraph responses and I only put one or two different links to overcome jihadi counter points per story. However, yesterday I was kicked out of digg.com. I was for sure not breaking the terms of service. I posted links to a story showing Hamas's support of Obama. It looks like the digg.com moderators don't care when people say Hitler was right and put links blaming jews for all the worlds problems, but they do care if one wants to show a different light on someone who they support. When I asked why this time I got a response saying that I was breaking the terms of service and that the decision was final. Keep in mind electro-jihadis post several times more links in the comment section were not banned.

I conclude the only reason I was banned is the ideological values of the digg.com moderators. But I might be wrong in regards to being banned for that Obama link because I also left links in different stories ranging from refuting charge that the Israel Lobby is responsible for the war in Iraq, to posting link in a story pointing out how people calling Israel founding a catastrophe are misguided.

I am starting to document disgusting digg.com comments with screen shoots. I am trying to capture the hate-filled comments next to the advertisements on the page. I think it is important for companies to know what their product is being associated with. It is the advisors that are supporting the hate and paying the salaries of the misguided, jihadi, or just plain evil moderators.

Once I get enough screen shoots I am going to make a short video and lead a campaign to persuade companies to not help fund the hate-fest at digg.com. I could use some help in collecting screen shots and ideas for the short. I am also looking for a good voice for voice overs. Leave a comment if you have a good voice and a microphone. I don't have the best voice and it is easy to send audio files these days.

Digg.com and wikipedia need fair and unbiased moderators that will ban electro-jihadis not people that are trying to correct them. Wikipedia and Digg.com get top search results. The lies being told at these sites due to poor moderation gives miss information to the billions of internet users that could read these lies and be misled.

It is important to do something now before it is too late. This amount of miss information if it goes unchecked will result in another holocaust.

If you think you are alone.... I've lost three account sat Digg backing you up and also fighting against the illogical following of Barack Obama. I have never used off color remarks either...nonetheless I've lost my account three times saying things against Barack Obama and in defense of Israel.

Digg blocked my blog more than a year ago for a similar reason, but officially - because "it was reported as a spam site".

Watcher did they prevent you from submitting stories or did they ban your account? I remember seeing you on digg. You have a great site btw. I read it every day. Keep up the good work.

If Digg is blocking you by IP address you must have a static IP address. What you need is either a proxy to post through or an ISP that does not issue you a static IP address.

I do not know if Digg blocks the larger proxies that are out there....you would have to find that out on your own. I have never used one. The services usually carry monthly charges.

If they are blocking your blog, the only thing to do is get a second blog and cross post or move your material to another blog.

Digg is a highly liberal socialist site with some folks who are even apparently Marxist. They are also primarily anti big business, antiRepublican, antiAmerican and antiIsraeli.

I believe that folks like us post because we are also looking to meet and "hang out" with folks of like minds and to influence folks who are yet "undecided." The fact of the matter is the huge numbers of people that are against us they can literally ban us every month on a whim no matter what we do. Our opinions are in the minority, and for the most part unsupported.

In order to get support at Digg you have to go to your base and bring people into Digg in large numbers for support. For you that means finding like minded individuals in the Jewish community or in Israel itself. I do believe that this can be done.

T I think one of the reasons or opinions are in the minority at Digg is because they ban anyone that thinks differently. Digg.com stories are usually on the top search results. It is important to not allow sites that pretend to be open forums to influence and brain wash people. I think Digg.com is making Jew hatred mainstream. Bringing people to Digg would do nothing because Digg will just ban them all. I think something needs to be done to bring attention to the moderators that are promoting there own agenda.

I do have a static IP. I should change it.

6.  T Says:
May 14, 2008 at 7:58 pm

I agree with what you said about the system and how to change it but that is going to be difficult because it is privately owned. The owners are going to make the moves on how it is run. I agree with what you have said to do, and more.

We can also overwhelm the system with people that will change it in significant numbers who are like-minded individuals and that will not give up. We have to take it over or have a number that is significant enough to not stop or give up. If you get enough of them the service will bend because a certain number of them will create the necessary reflection in posts and submittals.

If your static IP address is a problem and it continues to be a problem seek an ISP that gives you an IP adress via DHCP on a 24 hour basis for posts at Digg. Then if your account goes by the wayside within 24 hours you can be back up and running posting and submitting. Always back your "friends" up every week or two. Always tell your friends where they can go to see what your new username is. Try posting it in the news item....say at the top of the post.

Talk to you later. I'll stop by to see how you are doing two days from now. I'll be out tomorrow until late.

Good luck!

Here is a tool for posts and the related statistics to help you in your endeavors. <http://www.neaveru.com/digg/>

Try it on our “friend” Yellowcakewalk and Notque. Two antiIsraeli and antiAmerican posters.

8.  T Says:
May 14, 2008 at 8:18 pm

Bad news. The script died when fed Yellocakewalk. The number of posts for that user is over 4500 and the system could not handle it. It is a good script nonetheless. It shows standard deviation on posts for all posts at Digg. It is a handy tool to show bias in the community that you are targeting. Try it on other users....you can ever try it on your own account even after it has been banned.

9.  avideditor Says:
May 14, 2008 at 8:37 pm

Digg is privately owned but it depends on its advertisers. I think the hateful comments on the site degrade the brands image.

Thanks for the tool it is interesting. I got it to work for YellowCakeWalk by limiting the comment number http://www.neaveru.com/digg/stats/Yellowcakewalk/max_comments/1000 It shows alot how YellowCakeWalk didn't get banned for spreading over a thousand hateful comments in one month. I think the reason most of his comments are so highly rated is that digg.com bans the people that would vote him down.
